OLIVER REFUSES TO STATE WHERE MONEY CAME FROM

paid for by somebody. But if there is anyone in this hall who can stand up and say when and where and how I have ever authorized the government to do anything, I would be most grateful and honest service. I want to do so now. I have been interested in elections since 1904 and the past six years have been a general election as the head of an administrative office at Ottawa. I have a certain amount of authority. If there is anyone here who has tried to get me to do something, I can say that I have granted any favor or withheld my right because of any vote or influence, I want him to stand up now.

There was no response from the audience, and Mr. Oliver continued, "The fact that there is no response is not remarkable, because it is all the grand old politicians, it is all the grand old politicians, who are really required to prove a negative."

Defence Lawyer.

On a golf course—where a lawyer is a good place to have a quiet talk for private profit—if there is anyone here who can give an instance of a holdup or handout in regard to any administrative office, I want him to stand up now.

In response to this appeal, J. Sifton took the platform, presenting a statement of his own which he had written with considerable difficulty. He said that he had been born at Little Slave River, near the Lesser Slave Lake. Workmen who had descended into the depths of the water for timber to supply the garrison at Fort Chipewyan had been disengaged, and discharged from their jobs. They had not been able to recover their wages.

This charge was dismissed by Mr. Oliver with the remark that "the work came under the supervision of the public works department." It never came up under this kind of a court because it was never given," he said.

To Demand Inquiry.

Continuing, Oliver declared that if he were elected to parliament he would ask for a resumption of the inquiry into the graft "Insultation." Even if it was a definite question, it might be disposed of in a pro forma.

He then outlined his own version of the Manitoba-Southeastern railway transaction. It could be seen that the ability of apparently half a million acres of land west of the G.N.R. as a grant earned by the M. & S. E. for the construction of a railway from Whitemud to the Red River, and the fact that the land agent given by a conservative government was a substitute for a sum of money, was the reason the land must be fit for settlement.

The act of parliament did not define where the land should be, but a subsequent order in council stipulated that the land east of the Red River, when it was built, and the company could claim the land, had been discovered that the areas east of the Red River, then available, would not prove suitable. A portion was government land, and a portion was government swamp lands, and a part timber lands.

The minister of justice advised the company to change its name to "Inglis," and it was agreed to do so.

Premier Sifton's address to the company, he said, was "concerned with the question of the extension of the benefits to be derived from realization of the reciprocity pact." He compared a meeting which he attended in Edmonton in June 1906 with the events of June 1911.

Mr. Oliver said that the man who spoke at the meeting, who was the head of the Liberal government which brought the Liberal government into power in the Dominion, with the other two who attended, calling attention to the large increases in the attendance, and pointing out that no stronger argument could be put forward than that of the Liberal regime being responsible for the increase in population since the party came into power in 1896.

Speaking of reciprocity, he said that the man who spoke at the meeting, who had been instrumental in the politics of the Dominion during the past fifty years, had driven for close trade relations with the United States of America. Every trade agreement, he said, had been made with the United States when it was at the zenith of its popularity among the people of Canada, and at the time when he was instrumental in bringing into existence the statute which brought it into force.

In his treatment of the McMillan charge, Mr. Oliver said nothing to do with it. He just yet to discuss that point.

He said his private account of his bank account was any business either of McMillan or Sir Wilfrid.

"If anybody thinks the money belongs to me, let them sue me. I have no right as a private citizen more than your confidence. I have kept back nothing and apologize for anything and do not apologize."

If you wait for me to make a statement, he said, you will receive it.

He believes in vindicting their own injuries and leaving other people alone."

Waterways Policy.

The remainder of the hour of Mr. Oliver's speech was devoted to the Great Waterways policy. His opponents tried to find their proof that he had adhered to a conspiracy to prevent the development of this country. They had not succeeded.

The speaker did not attempt to quote figures to show how much the farmers will benefit in increased prices for their products, or the value of the markets obtained through the passing of the reciprocity agreement, because he said that the records went back to 1899.

Another exposition is that of the values, a good many of them in the big pump, were not given a chance.

Such questions ultimately will be answered in the present time the examination of the case, he said.

The situation, regretted by all, is by no means uniform. One explanation given is that the construction of the dam will bring in a new market for the lumber.

A New Feature.

The premier indicated a new feature of the railroad in view of reciprocity when he spoke of the fact that the slopes of the mountains need not be a road to Alaska, Canada. Some line would have done more for the development of the mineral resources of the north than the Waterways railway.

Desperate Desmond

While Tossed Aloft on a Spouting Geyser Rosamond Sends a Message to Claude by a Flying Squirrel

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

Claude had been born and his friends the hunters were soon after him. Desmond, however, was not so fortunate. He was born in a den deep in the forest, with no home or food in his power. Of course, he is now an expert in hunting, which is a disease, but Claude does not worry over difficulties where Rosamond's safety is concerned. In the meantime the Great White Villain and his men are still at large.

Hunting successfully hidden from Claude in the woods, the Great White Villain black all day preparing a terrible death for the helpless Desmond. But the day of retribution has come at last. They capture picks from some miners and proceed to dig. They know that the moment they strike oil a geyser erupts, so they bring their picks along to use it in their vengeance. As soon as the oil sprouts they throw their picks on it, and the jet carries them high in the air and Desmond has lost her presence of mind even in this position. As the flying squirrel goes by she places her hand on his shoulder and says, "Don't be afraid, old friend. Just stay where you are. A little while longer and we will be safe." She then turns and goes back to the geyser, feeling the effects of the hot steam sun, decides to fly through the geyser and cool off. A flying squirrel loves to play and from time to time she flies the air to have fun.

Fortunately, indeed, for Rosamond, that such is the nature of the squirrel.

Striped Effects Again Come Into Vogue—One-Piece Frocks Again in Style—Parisian Designers Have Many New Effects—Velvet Used Largely for Suitts

New York, Sept. 7.—The display of women's ready-to-wear fashions in the big stores is extremely attractive this year, owing to the wonderful variety and beauty of materials, colors, trimmings and accessories shown. It is too early in the season to say definitely what the coming season may bring, but the time for the full openings in Paris has not yet arrived, and the models sent out in negro, grey, blue and other alternative attempts to foreshadow the coming modes. For this reason season's offerings will do well to use great caution in making their selections at this time.

Stripes are almost everywhere, to be found in coats and the tailored suits included in this year's showing. In the fall for striped materials has lasted all through the summer and there is every reason to believe that its general popularity will continue. In fact, this season was one of the best looking three-piece suits seen among the advertising models. The new Fifth Avenue house is showing a rather novel style, yet not too vivid grey-blue striped frock with black and trimming in brown.

There are good gray-to-youning-striped suits, two-tone stripes or grey striped in black. Black striped with hair lines of white also seems to be being especially emphasized. A black broad-striped in hair lines of royal blue and navy blue with white piping, which the larger, looser weaves are apt to do. The latest novelty in weave is a pattern design, which suggests a very fine, close, ribbed texture, and is made of a heavy cloth.

The close-up of weave in beads is one of the newest features, which will be found in coats, to be used in greater durability and to be entitled to a place in the fall. Another innovation is the use of a heavy, ribbed, woven fabric, a chevron-like fold of blue silk from neck to just below the belt of the waistcoat opening and headed with a wide band of velvet.

Black or dark blue taffeta tailors' suits suggest a coat and skirt.

Real Estate BULLETIN

The movement on Jasper avenue west still continues, and we do not hesitate to predict that the next few weeks will witness one of the largest turnovers of Jasper properties west of Ninth street ever before recorded in the history of this city.

The steady demand for properties through the past summer-months in all residential districts of the city has laid foundation for a real estate movement which is appealing alike to large and small investors. It is hardly necessary to state that this movement is increasing and that we are now in an era of prosperity the like of which has never before been known in this municipality.

NEWS OF THE CITY

Mr. E. Olegg has returned from a three months' holiday spent in the old country. (Cont'd) Well, passenger train for the Canadian Pacific is due to leave today. He is a guest at the King Edward hotel. Secretary Brady of the Edmonton police force has returned to his office after a short absence to attend to the funeral of his father who died at Bowden, Alberta, August 31st. The services were held in Bowden and were conducted by Messrs. Hartstone and Graham. The plans are being drawn up and show that the building will be erected on modern lines for this purpose.

A local organization of the Loyal Order of the Moose is being founded by Frank W. Smith and G. H. Taylor. The order was founded 23 years ago in Louisville and now numbers more than 100,000 members.

The death occurred yesterday of Charles Massie at the McMillan hotel. The funeral will be held this afternoon, having been delayed over forty years old and formerly lived in Quebec.

With a larger attendance than it has ever had before Alberta College students gathered at the hall last night to celebrate the opening for the coming term.

There was a great picnic which the employees of Haller and Aldrich held at Cooking Lake was most successful. The camp was at Millwood Point where there are many fine trees.

Locust horse became frightened at a street car and automobile and started to run away last night. It was captured in the bushes today and was thrown into a trap and shot and sustained a severe cut over the right eye. Its injuries are not serious.

Locust horse, No. 2 which runs on the Packing plant line was seriously injured by being caught between two cars over a car another car which was following him. He was badly maimed but it is expected he will recover.

At the present time Education taxes in Jasper amount to but $88,381.41 which is a very good showing. Last year at this time the taxes in arrears amounted to $130,369.94. At this time State and taxes in arrears amount to $132,567.23.

Miss Dubson, shorthand teacher at the Grant Truth Building, Chicago, Miss, has been sold here for an advancement in the school system. She took the route to her home port when she put in here and the captain took on a cargo of fish consigned to his owners at Boston. The ship will probably be loaded again and a fine imposed upon the captain.

Louisburg, N. B., Sept. 7.—The American Traveller of Gloucester, Mass., has been sold here for an advancement in the school system. She took the route to her home port when she put in here and the captain took on a cargo of fish consigned to his owners at Boston. The ship will probably be loaded again and a fine imposed upon the captain.

PURSE SNATCHER MAKES GOOD HAUL

ROSS RUTHENIAN WOMAN OF RETIRED AGE SNATCHED FROM HER BY THIEF

Mrs. Eugenie Delo, of a retired wife of a Ruthenian priest, is missing $120 snatched from her by a thief last night on Rice street at the Bowes. The woman, Mrs. Eugenie Delo, was searching for a man about five feet six inches tall, wearing a black cap. After a struggle the thief wrenched a handbag from her hand and took off. The thief extracted the money, threw down the handbag and other contents and took off. His heels with Mrs. Delo running after him shouting for the police and for aid from a man whom she saw. The bandit then happened last evening about 10 o'clock. The thief ran to the C. N. R. yards and disappeared. Mrs. Eugenie Delo told her story to the police a search was made of the yards but no trace of the thief was found. A search was made of the scene of the robbery and the handbag where it had been thrown, the bag broken, just as the woman stated. The woman had come to Edmonton to visit her son, but her husband has been apprised of the theft.

Rev. G. A. Myers will reach Edmonton at 9:15 on Friday evening and will preach at Westminster church on Sunday, September 10, morning and evening.

Warning of Advance in Prices

Our Lots Are Too Cheap

Every time we drive a lot of customers to

G.T.P. Addition

It is as evident to them as it is to us that our prices are away below their real value.

Compare its location near what will soon be the largest pay roll centre of the city, the fine, high, dry site—the large lots and the exceptionally easy terms, with surrounding values, and the fact will be as evident to you.

But we are going to partially remedy this, as the price of every lot unsold Sept. 1 will be raised $25. But even then, at the advanced price, you will be getting in nearer the ground floor than on many other similar propositions.

Prices now $90 to $200

Terms, $10 cash and balance $5 per month.
